

Assistant/Associate/Full Professor - Probability - UC Berkeley Statistics

The Department of Statistics, in the Division of Computing, Data Science and Society at the University of California, Berkeley is consistently ranked as one of the two premier programs in statistics nationally. Since its inception, graduates and faculty of Berkeley have shaped the foundations of statistics. Past faculty in the Berkeley Statistics Department include such luminaries as David Blackwell, Leo Breiman, David Freedman, Lucien Le Cam, and Erich Lehmann. The department currently has over 30 active research faculty, four of whom are members of the National Academy of Sciences.

The Berkeley Statistics Department currently seeks applicants with outstanding records in any area of Probability for at least one position at the Assistant, Associate, or Full Professor level. Associate Professor and Full Professor positions carry tenure.

Assistant Professor applicants are expected to have demonstrated research potential. Serious consideration will be given to the candidate's potential for success in mentoring PhD students, a record in teaching at both the undergraduate and graduate levels, and potential for effective leadership. Serious consideration will be given to professional service, including service promoting access to and diversity in higher education and the academic profession.

The successful candidate for an Associate or Full Professor position will preferably hold a tenured (or equivalent) faculty position at another institution. Associate or Full Professor applicants are expected to have an established research record. Serious consideration will be given to the candidate's experience in mentoring PhD students, record in teaching at both the undergraduate and graduate levels, and evidence of effective leadership. Serious consideration will be given to professional service, including service promoting access to and diversity in higher education and the academic profession. Rank will be determined based on qualifications and experience.

Diversity, equity, inclusion and belonging are core values of the Department of Statistics. We believe that our excellence can only be fully realized by faculty, students, and staff who share fully our commitment to these values. The department is committed to addressing the family needs of faculty, including dual career couples and single parents. We are also interested in candidates who have had non-traditional career paths or who have taken time off for family reasons, or who have achieved excellence in careers outside academia.
